

Abstract

The invention relates to a driving gear used to transmit power, especially a toothed gear for machine tools. Said driving gear is produced from a warm-hardened-steel having a ferritic or pearlitic structure and a base hardness of the uncoated surface of at least 25 HRC, and a hard surface coating with a thickness of less than 10µm.